

Tuesdays in the Park 2025: A Community Tradition

Tuesday in the Park brings live music and community fun to outdoor lovers.

The 2025 lineup featured something for everyone:

- June 17: The Holdouts (eclectic originals)
- June 24: HomeSkillet (90s dance band)
- July 1: Rendezvous (50s–70s rock & blues)
- July 8: The Paul Holt Band (60s–80s classics)

Storms forced the rescheduling of two concerts. The community rallied, attendance remained strong, underscoring how deeply Tuesdays in the Park is valued.

The presenting sponsor, Oklahoma Central Credit Union (OCCU), offer art activities, plus hosted an art project where children and families decorated large letters spelling “OCCU.” The finished artwork will be displayed at a local branch as a reminder of community creativity.

Families and friends gather to enjoy summer nights filled with music.

Arts@302 hosted a kids’ art tent each week, offering hands-on activities such as poetry, drawing, and crafts. These opportunities gave children the chance to create and explore while parents enjoyed the concerts. With free admission, the series is open and welcoming to all. Thanks to sponsors like McGraw Realtors, Taste Treat, and Molded Products, residents and visitors enjoy high-quality entertainment at no cost. The event also boosted the Rose District, with local restaurants and shops seeing increased traffic.

The 2025 series was presented with support from OCCU, Arts@302, and other partners. Their contributions, combined with raffle proceeds and grants, helped keep the series free to all. The series is powered by ARTSOK board members, staff, and local volunteers, who make Tuesdays in the Park a true community effort.

The tradition continues in 2026 with five Tuesdays in June. Planning is already underway. ARTSOK plans to expand engagement features, offering even more ways to enjoy and participate.

OCCU invites all ages to help create a community art piece, hosted by Mindi Hamell at the Broken Arrow South branch.
